

The future of jobs

in history

COLD WAR

WORLD WAR II

AMERICAN CIVIL WAR

DECOLONISATION

History teaches you about the past and how these events can affect what's happening in the world today. You'll explore a variety of events and time periods in your history lessons.

Subject skills:

Communication

Critical thinking

Debating

Research

Time management

ENTREPRENEURSHIP › SOCIAL ENTERPRISE MANAGER

- You'll be in charge of a social enterprise, balancing the business's social responsibilities with making a profit.
- The UK's half a million social enterprises employ 1.44 million people and typically outperform traditional small businesses.
- A third of start-ups put social good as their core mission and social impact was the most important measure of success for CEOs.

Subject skill

Communication: You'll communicate clearly with members of your team, as well as promoting what you do to the public.

SCIENCE & RESEARCH › SPACE ARCHAEOLOGIST

- You'll use satellite imagery to look for ancient artefacts on Earth and monitor existing heritage sites that aren't easily accessible.
- Historic England predicts that the UK will need between 25% and 64% more archaeologists by 2033.
- Archaeologists were added to the list of shortage occupations in the UK in 2019, meaning that there are not currently enough in the UK.

Subject skill

Problem solving: You'll need to think of different ways to investigate new sites or solve issues relating to existing site management.

How will the most popular industries for history graduates change?

Finance › Financial manager was the UK's third fastest-growing job role from 2011 to 2019.

Marketing, PR and sales › PR is moving towards visual content such as infographics, GIFs and video.

Managers › 9 in 10 14 to 25-year-olds are thinking about setting up a business or are open to the idea.

Explore your future at successatschool.org

success at school
.org choose your next steps