

The future of jobs

in psychology

How do you feel?

Let it out

Psychology is a STEM+ subject which focuses on the mind and people's behaviour, with a focus on the thoughts, feelings and motivations behind people's actions.

Subject skills:

Critical thinking

Data analysis

Problem solving

Research

Teamwork

RECRUITMENT & HR › PEOPLE AND CULTURE SPECIALIST

- You'll work closely with people across an organisation to help it develop its culture so that it is appealing to existing and new staff.
- 96% of HR professionals believe employee experience is becoming more important which means employers need to better understand their staff.
- By 2027, there are expected to be 15,200 new HR manager jobs, while 83,500 job openings will be created by people in this sector retiring.

Subject skill

Critical thinking: You need to evaluate a business's activities and work out how it needs to develop attract the best staff.

CONSULTANCY › ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE TRAINING MANAGER

- You'll work within an organisation to assist with the introduction of artificial intelligence (AI) technology and ensure a smooth transition.
- Half of businesses have adopted at least one AI capability and many employees worry that new technology will be used to replace their role.
- 76% of executives believe technology and people need to be brought together in a more human-centric way.

Subject skill

Problem solving: Introducing technology carefully will help teams make the most of new systems and lessen fears of job losses.

How will the most popular industries for psychology and related graduates change?

Legal, social and welfare › There are over 2,000 forensic psychologists working in the UK today.

Health › Clinical psychologist jobs are on an upward trend, offering good job security in future.

Business, HR and finance › Human psychology will play an increasingly important role in HR.

Explore your future at successatschool.org

success at school
.org choose your next steps